

Virtual team leader mastermind roundtable accelerates learning, develops new skills in peer group setting

Combining real-time conversations and independent learning for maximum impact

Leaders tend to learn best when they can cross-pollinate knowledge with peers through facilitated conversations. That's why we've created this unique mastermind roundtable for virtual team leaders. In each highly interactive session, participants tap the experience of their peers and learn new tips, techniques and tools from seasoned consultants.

Nancy Settle-Murphy of Guided Insights and Penny Pullan of Making Projects Work have created a cost-effective, efficient and memorable learning experience for leaders who appreciate that traditional management skills do not necessarily translate to the world of virtual teams.

- Monthly, 60-minute sessions: We'll be running virtual team mastermind tables 10 times a year on XX day at 9 AM Eastern time. Each roundtable will be limited to 12 members. Participants will use phone and the FacilitatePro web meeting tool to ask questions, exchange idea and brainstorm ideas during the call.
- Multiple ways to learn: Members will have access to valuable reference material, articles and links related to the topic. We'll also use an asynchronous conference area for questions and comments. Members will have a chance to determine the topics they'd like to discuss.
- Modeling best virtual meeting practices: During each session, we'll describe and demonstrate new ways to engage virtual team members through meetings and other forms of communications.
- Required investments: The $4,500 annual fee includes 10 monthly roundtable meetings, access to reference material and meeting transcripts, participation in an ongoing online conference with other team members, and one hour of complimentary coaching for each participant.
